

A PROPOSAL FOR

MARSAL

مرسال

Brand evolution: a logomark, a consolidated bilingual signature, and the guide that holds it together.

PREPARED BY

Miradore Experiences

DATE

24 August 2026

DELIVERY

27 August 2026

INVESTMENT

SAR 9,400

RIYADH
24 AUG 2026

To the team at Marsal,

Further to our call last week, on 22 August, where we presented the brand evolution - we are glad the direction landed with you. This proposal follows that conversation, and, as you asked, it keeps the work to the brand evolution only.

To put the thinking on record: Marsal does not need a new logo. The one you have is doing its job, and there is real equity in it already sitting on your paperwork, your vehicles and your invoices. Redrawing it would be an expensive way to solve a problem you do not have.

What you do need is for that logo to work harder in the places it currently struggles. It has no short form, so there is nothing clean to put in a profile picture or an app icon. And when the Arabic and the English sit together, the signature runs wide and low - which is why it keeps getting shrunk into illegibility on cards, on nav bars, and on the side of a truck.

So the work here is evolution, not replacement. We pull a proper logomark out of the identity you already own. We consolidate the bilingual signature so Arabic and Latin hold equal weight in a footprint that fits. We settle the colour and the type. Then we write it all down in a guide short enough that people will actually open it.

That is why there is no stationery, no social templates and no website in what follows. Not because you will not need them, but because every one of them is cheaper and better once the mark is settled. When you are ready, we will price that against a mark whose behaviour we already know.

As you saw on the call, we did not bring a spread of logo options to pick from. We did the thinking, committed to one direction, and showed it applied to real things - a card, a truck panel, a profile picture - so you were judging a decision rather than a shape on a white page. That approach is what the rest of this schedule is built on.

With the direction approved, what remains is the refinement, the colour and type, and the guide that documents it. Everything lands with you on Thursday 27 August.

If any part of this reads as more, or less, than what you had in mind, tell us and we will reshape it. We would much rather adjust the scope now than hand you something you have to explain internally.

Warm regards,

Usman Fiaz

Miradore Experiences, Riyadh

CONTENTS

01	Where the identity stands today	03
02	What we are proposing	04
03	Scope of work, phase by phase	05
04	Delivery schedule	06
05	Investment and terms	07
06	What we need from Marsal	08

01

Where the identity stands today

An honest read of the current logo, and the three things holding it back.

This is not a criticism of the mark. It is a list of the jobs it is being asked to do that it was never drawn to do. All three are fixable without losing anything you have already built.

01

There is no short form

Every strong logistics brand carries two assets: a full signature for documents and letterhead, and a compact mark for everything else. Marsal has only the first. A profile picture becomes a squeezed wordmark, an app icon is not possible, and there is nothing to stitch onto a uniform, cut into vinyl for a vehicle door, or stamp onto a seal. Below roughly 25 mm wide, it simply stops reading.

02

The bilingual lockup runs too wide

Placed side by side, the Arabic and English signature becomes long and shallow. In a business card corner, a website navigation bar or a truck panel, the only way to fit it is to scale it down until neither language is legible. The two scripts also carry different optical weights, so one visually dominates the other depending on the size.

03

There is no system to work from

Without an agreed set of rules for the mark, colour, type and spacing, every new card, post or document is a fresh set of decisions – made by whoever happens to be making it. It is slower, it costs more over a year, and the drift shows, especially to the enterprise clients and government tenders where visual consistency is read as operational discipline.

02

What we are proposing

Three moves. Everything else in this document follows from them.

A
THE MARK

A logomark drawn out of the logo you already own

We do not start with a blank page. We take the existing Marsal logo apart, find the element carrying the most recognition, and develop it into a mark that stands alone. It has to survive four tests before we present it: legible at 16 pixels, readable in a single colour, cuttable in vinyl without detail loss, and distinct from the other logistics marks operating in the Kingdom.

One direction, developed properly - not a spread of options to choose between. We show it applied to real things, so you are judging a decision rather than a shape on a white page.

B
THE SIGNATURE

One consolidated bilingual signature, in three footprints

Arabic and Latin are matched on a shared baseline, with optical weights and heights tuned so neither script overpowers the other. One signature that holds together at any size, delivered in three configurations - each with a defined minimum size and clear-space rule, so nobody has to guess which version to use.

Indicative construction. The mark itself is Phase 02 work - the placeholder above stands in for it.

C
THE SYSTEM

A system light enough that your team will actually use it

Colour, typography, a supporting graphic device and clear placement rules - documented in a guidelines file people can read in fifteen minutes, not a 120-page manual that gets opened once. Everything ships with editable working files, so your team can produce day-to-day material without coming back to us for every post.

03

Scope of work, phase by phase

Four phases. The identity core, and the guide that documents it.

Phase 01 Read and audit

- Review of the existing logo files, and how the mark is being applied today
- Benchmark of eight to ten logistics identities operating in KSA and the wider Gulf
- A working session with your team - what the brand needs to carry, and where it keeps failing
- A one-page direction note, agreed before any design begins

Phase 02 Logomark and bilingual signature

- The logomark, developed from the existing Marsal logo and presented in application
- Full construction: proportion grid, clear space, minimum sizes
- Consolidated bilingual lockups - horizontal, stacked and mark-only
- One-colour, reversed, mono and vinyl-cut versions for production
- Icon renderings at 16, 32, 64, 128 and 512 px, plus favicon and app-icon files
- Master artwork delivered as AI, EPS, SVG, PDF and PNG

Phase 03 Colour palette and typography

- Primary and secondary palette, built to hold up in full colour and in one
- A reference for every medium - CMYK and Pantone for print, RGB and HEX for screen, vinyl and paint codes for the fleet
- Contrast checked on every colour pairing the brand will actually use
- A matched Arabic and Latin typeface pairing, with weights, hierarchy and usage rules

Phase 04 Brand guide and handover

- The brand guide as a PDF, for screen and print: the mark and its construction, clear space and minimum sizes, the bilingual lockups and when to use each, colour, typography, and correct against incorrect usage
- Organised master file library, named and structured so files can be found without us
- A handover walkthrough with your team
- 14 days of post-handover support for file and format questions

What lands in your hands on 27 August

01

logomark, developed and production ready

03

lockup footprints, plus reversed and one-colour

05

icon renderings, 16 px through 512 px

01

brand guide, PDF, screen and print

04

Delivery schedule

Kick-off 10 August. Final handover Thursday 27 August 2026.

Most of the window sat on the mark itself, which is where the value is. With the direction approved on 22 August, what remains runs in parallel - the colour and type work alongside the refinement, and the guide written from what has already been signed off. One review point left, marked in orange.

SAT 22 AUG · DONE

Direction presented

The brand evolution shown in application. Direction approved, and the scope set to the evolution only.

WED 26 AUG

Final review

The full identity together - mark, lockups, colour and type - signed off before the guide is produced.

THU 27 AUG

Handover

Every file delivered and organised, with a walkthrough for your team.

WEEKENDS

The Kingdom weekends inside this window are 14 to 15 and 21 to 22 August. Our studio keeps a reduced working pass across them so the schedule holds.

DEPENDENCY

The remaining schedule assumes feedback at the final review comes back the same day, consolidated and from one approver. Anything longer moves the handover with it.

05

Investment and terms

What you receive, and what it costs.

DELIVERABLES

- The logomark, developed from the existing Marsal logo, with its full construction - proportion grid, clear space and minimum sizes
- Consolidated bilingual lockups - horizontal, stacked and mark-only
- One-colour, reversed, mono and vinyl-cut versions for production
- Icon renderings at 16, 32, 64, 128 and 512 px, plus favicon and app-icon files
- Primary and secondary colour palette, referenced for every medium - CMYK and Pantone, RGB and HEX, vinyl and paint codes
- A matched Arabic and Latin typeface pairing, with weights, hierarchy and usage rules
- The brand guide as a PDF, for screen and print
- Master artwork in AI, EPS, SVG, PDF and PNG, in an organised file library

Standard fee for this scope

SAR 13,500

Discount, as agreed

- SAR 4,100

TOTAL

SAR 9,400

ALSO INCLUDED

- Two rounds of consolidated revisions at the review point
- Full ownership of the final approved artwork, transferred to Marsal
- Editable working files, not just flattened exports
- 14 days of support after handover for file and format questions

NOT INCLUDED

- Stationery, collateral, social templates and website - a separate phase, priced once the mark is signed off
- Printing and physical production of any item
- Photography and video production
- Third-party font licences, if a commercial typeface is selected
- Vehicle wrap production and fitting
- Trademark filing and registration

PAYMENT

The fee is payable in full on approval of the final identity. The complete set of deliverables and master files is released once payment is received. Bank transfer to Miradore Experiences, Riyadh.

VALIDITY

This proposal, and the discounted fee in it, hold for 30 days from 24 August 2026.

WHAT COMES NEXT

This proposal is deliberately limited to the brand evolution. Applying it is the natural second phase - stationery, the social and profile kit, fleet livery, the website. We would rather price that once the mark is signed off and we know exactly what it has to sit on than guess at it now.

06

What we need from Marsal

Four things. Nothing that should take more than an hour to gather.

- One named approver for the final review. This schedule does not survive design by committee, and it is the single biggest risk to the date.
- Your Arabic legal name exactly as registered, letter for letter. The bilingual signature is drawn on it, and a correction later means redrawing it.
- Any colour you are already committed to - a paint code on the fleet, a value sitting in the current logo files - so the palette is built around it rather than against it.
- Two or three photographs showing where the mark appears today - a vehicle, a sign, a document - so we can see what it is actually up against.

HOW IT RUNS

You hear from us at two points, not ten. The first was the direction presentation on 22 August, which you have approved. The second is the final review, where you see the mark, the lockups, colour and type together before the guide is produced. Between those points we work, and we do not send fragments for reaction. It keeps the decisions clean, and it keeps the date.

CONFIRMATION TO PROCEED

Signing below confirms the scope, fee and schedule set out in this document, and authorises Miradore Experiences to begin work.

NAME AND SIGNATURE, FOR MARSAL

TITLE

DATE

Any questions before you sign, call us. We would much rather talk it through than have you agree to something on paper that does not match what you pictured.

MIRADORE EXPERIENCES

Riyadh, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia / hello@miradore.co / miradore.co